Diageo Americas: The Sequel

Key Insights & Recommendations

Executive Summary

Diageo is the leading individual vendor in this market, driven by strong rum and whiskey brands. However, growth is concentrated in a few products and counties, leaving opportunities to expand into new categories and underserved areas.

The biggest opportunity isn't protecting what's already working; it's growing where Diageo has room to gain market share.

1. Diageo's success is driven by a few standout rum and whiskey brands, while vodka, tequila, and gin have much lower visibility.

Recommendation:

Build stronger marketing and distribution for brands like Smirnoff and Don Julio in stores where Diageo already has a strong presence.

2. Sales are concentrated in a small number of counties while many areas have little Diageo presence.

Recommendation:

Focus on expanding distribution in underserved, high-potential counties to reach new customers and create long-term growth.

3. Diageo is the strongest individual vendor, but smaller competitors still make up a larger share of the market.

Recommendation:

Use distributor partnerships, bundled promotions, and volume incentives to win more shelf space and increase Diageo's overall market share.
